BAKERY DELIVERY OF SCHOOL BOARD CAR WRECKED IN PECULIAR MANNER

Truck Turns Over in Trying to Pass Another Machine on Fifth Avenue.

DRIVER IS BADLY INJURED

Two Companions Riding With Him Flee After Accident Without Waiting to Give Aid.

Al Thornbloom of Moline and two companions had a fortunate escape from instant death at 12:45 this noon, when Langbehn's large auto delivery, skidded and turned over opposite the Rock Island depot at Thirty-first street and Fifth avenue. The top of the car was practically demolished and the entire front end of the car caved in. Thornbloom was rushed to St. Anthony's hospital, where he is lying in a stunned condition. He was cut by flying glass, sustained a severe abrasion in the back of his head and two of his ribs are probably broken.

Thornbloom was on his daily trip delivering bakery goods, and was going east on Fifth avenue at about 20 miles an hour. A roadster, owned and driven by Alfred Cramer of this city, was going the same direction just ahead of him. In trying to pass the other car the front wheels of the bakery truck stuck in the tracks, the left front wheel brushing the roadster, causing the driver to lose his grip on the wheel. The truck swerved toward the south, struck the curbing and turned over with a crash of breaking glass and splintering wood.

Companions Run.

A number of eyewitnesses to the accident who were sitting in the barcessful service, assuring him of its ber shop in Campbell's hotel saw the grateful obligation for the past, and driver's two companions climb out of its best wishes and a hearty godspeed the wreckage apparently unhurt and run to the east up Fith avenue. The unfortunate driver of the car was still pinned under the twisted steering gear and the spectators pulled him out. A physician was summoned and Thornbloom was removed to the hospital in Mr. Cramer's car.

Now fill the sterilized jars with the drained berries, pour over the hot syrup till it overflows and put on the tops tight.

Have your wash boiler ready with cloths or pieces of wood on the bottom on which to set the jars (they must not touch each other). Put this on the stove, fill boiler with hot water till it reaches the covers of jars, put on boiler cover (to retain steam) and boil 20 minutes. You can let the jars stay in the boiler until cold enough to handle, if you like, then take out the jars, tighten covers and lay on their sides for a few days, rolling them back and forth several times a day, so the berries will not come to the top of the jar.

The Daisy Fairy

O NCE upon a time eleven little nately there were exactly eleven fairies went out for a play, petals, so each daisy had one and Through the forest they they rested comfortably for several strolled—over the fields and up to minutes.

Then the leader fairy said, "See Then the leader fairy said, "See a-field, come quickly, we must go home."

"Oh, I don't want to go home," answered Laughing-Light, "why must we go so early?"

"Early!" exclaimed the leader,
"Early!" do you think it is—don't "what time do you think it is-don't you see that the sun is dropping down and down, and that the sun-beams are already slanting reddish rays? It is time for us to start and to start quickly too."

"Sure enough" exclaimed half a dozen fairies all at once, "we were having such a good play we didn't notice the time." So they called and whistled till they got the whole band together; then they started for home. Down the hillside, across a little creek, and into the field.

But the fairies had been playing

"How comfortable you look-I'm going to rest too," exclaimed the leader

but the fairies had been playing all day, and they were oh so tired; they hadn't noticed at all how tired they were, till they started for home. Then they found that the hill was steep and the field was wide and fough.

Probably you, too, have noticed how much further away things are when you are going home. The tired-er you get the further home moves away.

The fairies got as far as the daisy-patch when Laughing Light exclaimed, "I can't go another step. I'm going to sit down on this daisy petal and rest, so there."

So she fluttered up to the daisy and sat down on one of the snowy white petals.

"How comfortable you look—I'm going to rest too, exclaimed the leader fairy, and down he slid to the ground and scampered off for home.

"I better go too." said another fairy, "and I too," said another till nine fairies slid down the daisy stem and followed the leader towards home.

That left one lazy little fairy, all alone on the daisy.

"I'm too tired to walk another step." How murmured sleepily, "and anyway I guess any flower is a good home for a fairy, and I'll just sleep here."

So she folded her wings, curled up comfortably and went to sleep. The slanting sunbeams kissed her good night, the daisy petals curled gently around her, and the stafs came out to guard her rest.
